A particular type of stochastic two-dimensional fluid model can be approached in an analogous way to a traditional Stochastic Fluid Model by working in the operator domain. The theoretical basis for this has been published. However, trying to apply this work has lead to a number of unexpected surprises. In this talk I’ll focus on explaining these surprises.